O Canada! Where pines and maples grow,
Great prairies spread and Lordly rivers flow
How dear to us thy broad domain,
From East to western Sea
Thou land of hope for all who toil!
Thou True North strong and free
O Canada etc.,

Ruler Supreme, who hearest humble prayer,
Hold our Dominion in Thy loving care.
Help us to find, O God in thee
A lasting, rich reward,
As, waiting for the Better Day,
We ever stand on guard.
O Canada etc.,

Exhortation

We are gathered together on this hallowed occasion to remember our fallen Comrades, and to pledge ourselves to continue the struggle for that better world for which we fought, and for which they died. To this end we dedicate our lives to God.

The Lord's Prayer.

The Apostles' Creed

I believe in God the Father Almighty, Maker of Heaven and Earth:

And in Jesus Christ his only Son our Lord Who was conceived by the Holy Ghost, Born of the Virgin Mary, suffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified, dead and buried; He descended into Hell; The third day He rose again from the dead; He ascended into Heaven, and sitteth on the right hand of God the Father Almighty; From thence He shall come to Judge the quick and the dead.

I believe in the Holy Ghost; The Holy Catholic Church; The Communion of Saints; The Forgiveness of sins; The Resurrection of the Body, and the life everlasting.

Psalm 90

Lord, Thou hast been our refuge; from one generation to another.

Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever the earth and the world were made: Thou art God from everlasting, and world without end.

Thou turnest man to destruction: Again Thou sayest, Come again ye children of men.

For a thousand years in thy sight are but as yesterday: seeing that it is past as a watch in the night.

As soon as thou scatterest them they are ever as a sleep: and fade away suddenly like the grass.

In the morning it is green, and groweth up: but in the evening it is cut down, dried up, and withered.

For we consume away in thy displeasure: and are afraid at Thy wrathful indignation.

Thou hast set our misdeeds before Thee: and our secret sins in the light of Thy countenance.

For when Thou art angry all our days are gone: We bring our years to an end, as it were a tale that is told.

The days of our age are threescore years and ten; and though men be so strong that they come to fourscore years: yet is their strength then but labour and sorrow; so passeth it away, and we are gone.

But who regardeth the power of thy wrath: for even thereafter as a man feareth, so is thy displeasure.

So teach us to number our days: that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom.

Turn thee again, O Lord, at the last: and be gracious unto thy Servants.

O satisfy us with thy mercy, and that soon: so shall we rejoice and be glad all the days of our life.

Comfort us again now after the time that Thou hast plagued us: and for the years wherein we have suffered adversity.

Shew thy servants thy work: and their children thy glory.

And the glorious majesty of the Lord our God be upon us: Prosper Thou the work of our hands upon us, prosper Thou our handy-work.

HYMN

O God, our help in ages past
Our hope for years to come,
Our shelter from the stormy blast,
And our eternal home!

Beneath the shadow of thy throne
Thy saints have dwelt secure:
Sufficient is thine arm alone,
And our defense is sure.

Before the hills in order stood,
Or earth received her frame,
From everlasting thou art God,
To endless years the same.

A thousand ages in thy sight
Are like an evening gone;

Short as the watch that ends the night
Before the rising sun.

O God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come:
Be thou our guard while troubles last,
And our eternal home!

Prayers

HYMN

God of our fathers, known of old,
Lord of our far-flung battle line,
Beneath whose awful hand we hold
Dominion over palm and pine:
Lord God of hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget, lest we forget.

The tumult and the shouting dies:
The captains and the kings depart;
Still stands thine ancient sacrifice,
An humble and a contrite heart:
Lord God of hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget, lest we forget.

Far called our navies melt away,
On dune and headland sinks the fire;
Lo, all our pomp of yesterday
Is one with Nineveh and Tyre!
Judge of the nations, spare us yet,
Lest we forget, Lest we forget.

For heathen heart that puts her trust
In reeking tube and iron shard;
All valiant dust that builds on dust,
And guarding calls not thee to guard:
For frantic boast and foolish word,
Thy mercy on thy people,
Lord. Amen.

BENEDICTION

A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE LOYAL EDMONTON REGIMENT

RESUMÉ.

"Of all the Canadian fighting outfits out there, I pick the Edmontons as the finest regiment in the line!" These are the words quoted in the Canadian Press as from a top flight observer who saw the Canadians in action in Sicily and Italy.

The Edmontons are justly proud of their record in the two world wars. The old "Forty-Niners" recall famous actions of 1914—1918 with names like Amiens, Cambrai, Arras, Passchendale, Ypres, Vimy, Mount Sorrel, Courceletts and the Pursuit to Mons. The new Loyal Edmontons talk about Vino Ridge, the fierce street fighting of Ortona, the Hitler line, and the dykes of the Italian rivers. The same spirit of determination and rugged fighting efficiency dominates the men of today as it did their fathers before them.

Edmonton organized some 13 Battalions of infantry in the last war and early in 1915 the 49th Battalion was recruited by Lt-Col (Maj. Gen. now deceased) W. A. Griesbach, and sent overseas in the same year. It was recruited mainly from the Edmonton and Peace River districts. After a distinguished record it returned with flying colours to Edmonton and was demobilized in 1919.

There came into being that year the NPAM unit known as the 49th Bn, The Edmonton Regiment, organized to perpetuate not only the 49th Bn, but also the 51st and 66th Bns from whom large numbers of reinforcements were drawn during the war. In keeping with territorial traditions they were allied to the Loyal Regiment (North Lancashire) and, through them, to The Kimberley Regiment (South Africa) and The Wide Bays (Australia).

A new badge was authorized after the last war. It had the vanes of a windmill pivoting on a coyotes head and a scroll beneath with the words "Edmonton Regiment" inscribed. Between the vanes, at the top there was a crown and "Canada"; with "49" in the lower space and a Maple Leaf in the right and left spaces to honor the 51st and 66th Bns. The 49 has since been removed and a Maple Leaf substituted to make all battalions equal. The windmill perpetuates the memory of Flanders and the coyote's head the prairies and also the Regiment's first mascot — a coyote pup, which travelled overseas with the battalion and was subsequently left in the London Zoo.

Regimental colours were also approved. French grey for the 3rd Division, green for the 7th Brigade and a thin black stripe for The Loyal Lancashire Regiment. This black stripe was worn in mourning for Wolfe with whom The Loyals fought at Quebec. The colours were presented to The Edmonton Regiment by the King in England in 1941. The well known Scottish tune "Bonnie Dundee" was selected as the Regimental march, for its stirring music and fighting history.

At the outbreak of this war, the C.O., Lt-Col.

W. G. Stillman, was ordered to mobilize the Edmonton Regiment and recruit it up to strength. The official name was to be the 49th Edmonton Regiment. On December 15, 1939, the new unit left Edmonton and landed in Scotland on December 30, 1939. Then followed a hectic period of training, move and countermove. In turn they were ordered to Norway, France and Spitzbergen, and each time the order was counter-manded at the last moment. One Company, did manage to get into the Spitzbergen raid. A succession of Commanding Officers, before and during operations, brought forward names like Wilson, Kitching, Jefferson, Coleman, Day, Bell-Irving, Stone and Cromb — each, with his magnetic personality adding to the now unbreakable spirit of co-operative teamwork, of which the Regiment is so justly proud.

In 1943, after an intensive period of training, the Bn embarked for the invasion of Sicily. On 10 July 1943 began the 39 day campaign through the scorching heat, the white-hot dust and the hills that seemed to have no top, through which the men of The Edmonton Regiment learned the meaning of war, and the fact that the enemy was not a super-human monster that could not feel defeat. The battles of Piazza-Armerina, Leonforte, Agira and Hill 736 taught the men, that when one of their comrades was tagged "casualty" it meant something much different than when he had been tagged "caualty" on the schemes in England. With the engagements of Revisoto and the Salso Valley, the first campaign of this war in Sicily for The Edmonton Regiment was over. It was then learned that by Royal Charter, the new title they were to bear was The Loyal Edmonton Regiment.

At the end of a short rest period the Bn crossed the Straits of Messina to begin the pursuit of the German forces in Italy. Taking the hilly features with as much dislike for the terrain, but with as much determination to get on as they had in Sicily, they advanced from the toe of Italy up to the calf of its leg-like geography before meeting real resistance. The towns of San Bartolomeo, Baselice, Cercemaggiore and Vinchiatura were captured in quick succession and then the sharp fight at Colle d'Anchise brought an end to the Bn's second campaign.

The 1st Canadian Division went into rest around the Campobasso area, with The Loyal Edmonton Regiment in the brickyard at Baranello, until they were committed again to battle, this time along the Adriatic coast. Following the break-through of the Sangro valley, the Canadians crossed the Moro river, and The Loyal Edmontons fought through San Leonardo to "Vino Ridge"; a bitter battle with the enemy resisting fiercely to retain control of the approaches to the seaside town of Ortona. It was not until 21 December 1943 that the way was cleared for the Regiment to launch the head-on assault on this fortress city, Ortona, now famous in the annals of this war. For eight days and nights it was attack, attack, and yet again, attack from street to street, from building to building and from attic to cellar, with arms sounding continuously through the smoke and dust that hung so heavily over the town, that at times high-noon seemed like dusk. December 29 the battle was over. The town was ours. The Loyal Edmonton Regiment rested.

After an all too short rest in the ruins of Ortona there followed the seemingly unending period in the static line along the Arielli River, a few miles further north. Here, in the cold and rain of a long Italian winter, the Canadians lived in the slime and mud of their slit-trenches for a period, broken only by short rests out of the line, of more than three months. "Patrol" became the middle name of almost every man as thrusts were launched into the enemies lines almost every night.

Eventually signs of spring began to show and the 1st Division was moved to the central-south of Italy for a period of infantry-cum-tank training prior to the launching of a new spring offensive. This offensive came, for The Loyal Edmonton Regiment, on the 23 May 1944, when the all-out attack on the Hitler Line was made. That day will be remembered by all who took part as the one day in the history of this Regiment during which more hate and concentrated fury was dished out by the enemy than in any other equivalent period of time. From early morning, through the stifling heat of the afternoon, and the darkness of the ensuing night, a seemingly unending hail of enemy artillery, and mortar shells of all calibres fell amongst the attacking Canadians with unabating intensity. Indeed, in the whole of the 2nd Cdn Inf

Bde casualties have never, before or since, been so high for a 24 hour period. The battle was short, however, and by the 25 May the Regiment was moving in its advance that ended with the capture of Frosinone and Mount Radiccino, just prior to the fall of Rome.

During the summer of 1944 The Loyal Edmonton Regiment relaxed in a rest and training period at Piedmonte d'Alife, east of Naples, until around the first of August, when the division began concentrating on the east coast of Italy preparatory to the attack on the Gothic Line, the German's longest and most formidable line in his defences in Italy. This attack was preceded by one of the most skillfully executed deception moves in which this Regiment took part. Convoy after convoy of allied troops of every nation moved into the Florence area and, in turn, held the line along the River Arno for a period of two or three days and left the enemy with the impression of a tremendous concentration of troops. The mass of troops were assembling not there, however, but on the extreme east coast of Italy, as one division after another completed its few days in front of Florence and was then rushed, under strict security, to the other coast. On the 24 August the attack on the Gothic line commenced and from the silent crossing of the Metauro River until the capture of the Fortunato Ridge on the 25 September the Edmontons launched one attack after another with varying degrees of severity, but always with success, till the full depth of the Gothic line had been penetrated and the entrances to the Lombardy Plains were ours. This advance, during which the Regiment zig-zagged from one feature to another, forced the enemy from numerous features essential to his defense, such as the S'Giovanni feature (2800 metres high) which was captured in a 5,000 yard night attack; Monte Luro, a completely bare dominating mountain, pitted with dug-in panther turrets, pill-boxes and trenches; Monteccicardo, the hill-top village against which one attack was launched by another regiment and four separate attacks were launched by the Edmontons before victory was finally achieved, and the town captured. The final penetration of the depths of the Gothic line was made by the bitterly fought, but successful, two day attack for the approaches to, and the S'Fortunato ridge, running inland from Rimini. After the conclusion of this battle, which netted several hundreds of prisoners, the Regiment was taken to the sea-side resort of Riccione a'Mare for a few weeks rest.

When The Loyal Edmonton Regiment was next committed to battle, it was on the heavily vegetated, flat ground on the Lombardy Plains, which, almost like a pattern, were cut with one canal after another. The high dykes, deep canals, and closeness of the country, assisted the enemy greatly in his defences and our gains were made literally yard by bitterly contested yard. The Pisciatello River, crossed on the 18 October was only a short distance from the Savio River. Here too, an intense three day battle was fought, and the heavy rain which fell made the river so impassable that for two days the infantry were unable to receive anything by way of support, except man-packed ammunition, and even that was impossible for a time as the river was too swift for a man to swim. After one river came another canal, and so on until, across the Naviglio Canal, the last of the enemies counter-attacks was beaten off and the 1st Canadian Division settled down to hold the winter line along the dyke of the Senio River.

At last, a long rumoured event became an actuality and the 1st Canadian Corps began in March 1945, its long move from Italy to join the 1st Canadian Army in Europe. From Leghorn The Loyal Edmonton Regiment crossed in LCI's to Marseilles and from there in the famous "GF" convoy across France into Belgium, where for two weeks the Bn learned to appreciate the hospitality of the Belgian people in the little village of Nijlen. From there, into a concentration area in the Reichswald forest in Germany, the Regiment again prepared for battle, which came with the Buffalo crossing of the IJssel River in Holland on the 12 April 1945. The magnitude of the European war was brought home to the Bn with the leap-frogging attacks in which a Company would find itself the advance element of the Division in the morning and the reserve Company of the reserve Bn by night-fall of the same day. Highly organized resistance of the enemy had been broken and any clashes that were made were on relatively small scales, as in the case of a Company which was held up for a full day before being successful in capturing its objective bridges across the river just west of Voorst. Then came a period of long thrusts into enemy territory during which there was little fighting but an incredible amount of cheering and flag-waving by the hilariously happy Dutch people as one town after another turned out en-masse to "welcome the liberators". This was brought to a culminating head with the 19 mile advance out "into the blue" to the village of Barneveld where The Loyal Edmonton Regiment linked up with the 5 Cdn Armoured Division which had been making a similar advance up from the south.

Then came rumours of peace - instigated by the complete break-up of the German army in Europe. Finally, on Tuesday, 8 May 45 the fighting career of The Loyal Edmonton Regiment in the European phase of the second World War came to an end. The news was received within the Regiment almost complacently, almost as an anti-climax, without demonstrations, or celebrations, or cheering. It had been so long. So many battles had been fought. So many miles had been covered. So many men had fallen that realization came slowly to the men of The Loyal Edmonton Regiment that this, the most terrible war in the history of mankind had come to an end.
