REPORT on . . Gordon & Co.'s Dry Gin." . . .

London, Dec. 22nd, 1908.

On several occasions (in 1892, 1899 and 1904), I have analysed samples of Gordon's Dry Gin. The results invariably have been excellent; I have at the present time again submitted to analysis a sample of this Spirit, with results entirely corroborative of the previous analyses. The analytical data, which accompany this Certificate, show that the Gin is absolutely dry, not the least trace of sugar being present; and the proportions of secondary constituents are extremely minute; indeed from all practical points of view these may be regarded as absent.

The alcoholic strength of the Gin is high, and I have no hesitation in once more expressing the opinion that Messrs. Gordon's Dry Gin is a Spirit of the highest possible quality.

World's Records.

As the expression "World's Records" has been frequently used in the press and elsewhere with regard to speeds attained by motor vehicles, the Royal Automobile Club desires to make the following statement:—

"The speed performances of motor vehicles can only be described as World's Records if application has been made to the National Automobile Club of the country concerned to have the data laid before the next meeting of the International Association of Recognised Automobile Clubs, and if such application has been passed by that body. The performance in question is then recognised throughout the world as a World's Record, and the particulars are entered in the Register kept in Paris in the Bureau of the International Association.

"All World's Records have to be made under certain specified conditions laid down by the International Association.

"World's Records are for SPEED alone, horse-power being disregarded, and there is therefore no classification.

"The results of the Royal Automobile Club Certified Trials cannot be described as Records."

ROYAL AUCTION BRIDGE MAXIMS.

BY W. DALTON,

Author of Bridge Abridged, Royal Auction Bridge, etc.

The declaration is the Alpha and the Omega, the beginning and the end, of Royal Auction Bridge. The play of the cards is quite a secondary consideration, compared with the declaration.

In declaring at the score of love all there are only three values:—(1) No Trumps, which takes three by cards to win the game; (2) Royal Spades and Hearts, either of which takes four by cards to win it; (3) Diamonds and Clubs, which require five by cards.

There are also three considerations to bear in mind in declaring:—(1) to win the game yourself; (2) to prevent your adversaries winning it; (3) to defeat your adversaries' declaration.

Intermediate scores, which possibly win 16 or 24 points, but do not win the game, are not worth considering.

When it is a question of a doubtful contract, always leave your opponents to play for it instead of playing for it yourself, unless the success of their contract will win the game for them.

DECLARATION BY THE DEALER

The first declaration by the dealer must always be a sound one. Other players may make bluffing declarations if they are so minded, but the dealer—never.

The dealer may declare 'One No Trump' on an average hand—that is, one ace, one king, one queen, etc., or the equivalent of that, but he should not declare 'No Trumps' on less than that strength.

The dealer should never make an original suit declaration without high cards at the head of it—either ace, or king, queen, or king, knave, ten.

Numerical strength, without high cards, is an inexcusable declaration for the dealer to make originally, although it may be excusable in subsequently overbidding the opponents.

BRIDGE—continued.

Royal Auction Bridge, even to a greater degree than Auction Bridge, is a game of aces and kings, not of numerical strength.

A strong suit declaration is much better for the dealer to make than a 'No Trump' call; even though the latter may be somewhat above the average.

Under the new rules the dealer is not obliged to say anything, and he, of all people, should never make a call unless it is a thoroughly sound one. He is certain to have another chance of coming in, and he can afford to wait.

Nearly all the disasters at Royal Auction Bridge are brought about by the dealer making an unsound call—such a call as 'One Heart' on knave, and four or five small ones.

When the dealer holds a very strong suit, on which he is prepared to go up to three or four tricks, he should call two, or even three, tricks in it at once, so as to shut out other declarations. This is especially useful when the suit is Spades or Hearts.

THE DECLARATION BY THE SECOND PLAYER

When the dealer has passed, the second player finds himself in the position of first declarer, and any declaration which was a sound one for the dealer to make is, a fortiori, a sound one for the second player.

The second player should go even further than this, and should declare a suit if he can possibly do so.

When the dealer has called 'One No Trump,' the second player should very rarely overcall him. This may surprise many players, but it is thoroughly sound nevertheless.

The second player should never overcall 'One No Trump' unless he can see a possibility of winning the game himself.

If the second player would only be content to keep quiet and say nothing when he has a good hand, there would be far less light 'No Trump' calls by the dealer.

Another consideration is that the fourth player may be able to declare a suit, which will strengthen the hand of the second player enormously, and perhaps enable him to double 'Two No Trumps,' or to declare 'Two No Trumps' himself.

When the dealer has declared a suit, the second player should overbid him if he can do so with safety, either in another suit, or with 'One No Trump,' if he is guarded in the declared suit, but it must be a sine qua non that he must be guarded in that suit.

BRIDGE—continued.

THE DECLARATION BY THE THIRD PLAYER

When the dealer and second player have both passed, the third player has a free hand, and should make any declaration which appears to him a sound one. It is of great importance to show his partner a suit, in case of a 'No Trump' declaration by the fourth player.

When his partner has called 'One No Trump,' and has been overcalled by the second player, he must on no account call 'Two No Trumps,' unless he is well guarded in the declared suit. If he has fair strength in any higher suit than the declared one, he should call two tricks in that suit.

If he has considerable strength in the suit declared by the second player, and very little else, he should double the second player's call, so as to give his partner the option of going 'Two No Trumps,' or of leaving the double alone.

The third player should always support a suit declaration of his partner's, if he can help him to the extent of three or four tricks, whether those tricks are in trumps or in outside cards. In fact, it is better when they are in outside cards.

When the dealer has called 'One No Trump,' and the third player has a really strong suit in Spades or Hearts, he should always call two tricks in his strong suit.

DOUBLING

Doubling, at Royal Auction Bridge, is a two-edged weapon which is very apt to turn and rend the doubler.

You should always distinguish between a free double and a dangerous double.

A free double is when the fulfilment of the contract will win the game for the opponents, as 'Three No Trumps' or 'Four Hearts.'

A dangerous double is when the fulfilment of the contract will not win the game; as 'Three Hearts,' or 'Four Diamonds,' at the score of love.

It is a fatal mistake to think it necessary to take your partner out of a double. You will probably only get into much worse trouble, especially if you increase the number of tricks to be won.

When you have the choice between winning the game yourself or doubling the opponents, it is nearly always better to win the game if it carries the rubber with it.
